Genuineness: An Overlooked Element of Inviting Behavior

Misunderstood

Daniel E. Shaw, Ph.D.

Associate Professor
Behavioral Medicine
Nova Southeastern University
College of Osteopathic Medicine

danshaw@nova.edu
danshaw@invitationaleducation.net

My Mentors

My Mentors Then at the University of Florida
Circa 1974

Objectives

Participants will be able to:

- Define the concept of "Genuineness"
- Describe the process and key elements of Invitational Theory (IT)
- Propose how "Genuineness" fits as a key element of IT

Genuineness

- A concept not directly addressed in Invitational Theory
- I propose that it no longer be overlooked

Genuineness

- Actually possessing the alleged or apparent attribute or character
- Not spurious or counterfeit; authentic
- Honestly felt or experienced
- Actual; real
- Free from hypocrisy or dishonesty; sincere.

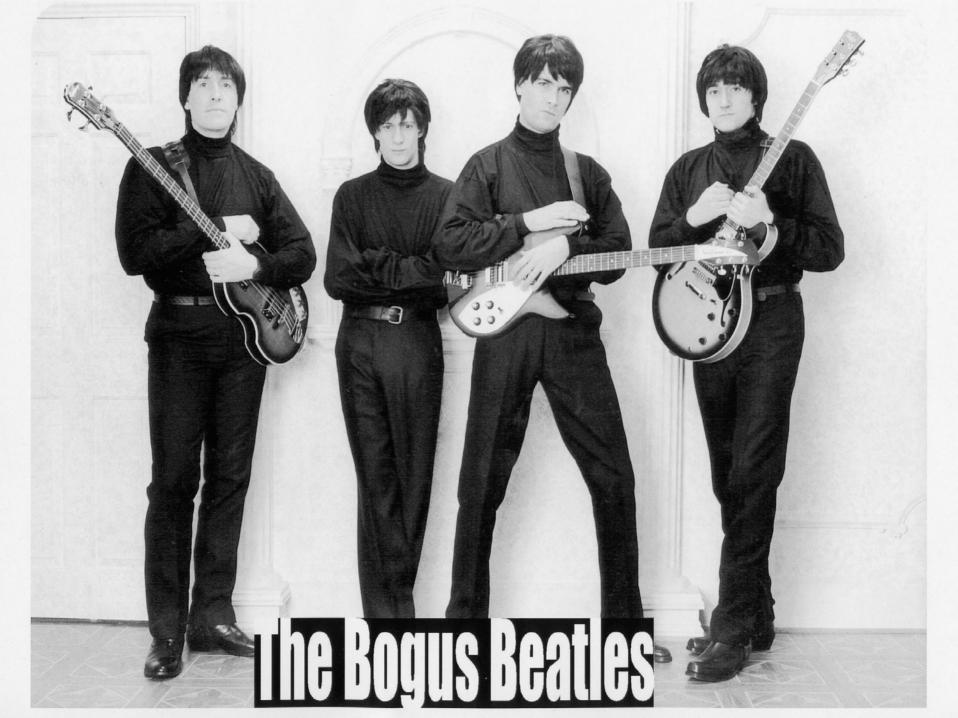

"He's a phony. I asked him to name his reindeer, and he included Wolf Blitzer

Genuiness vs. Disingenuiness

- True
- Real
- Actual
- Honest

- False
- Imitation
- Counterfeit
- Lie
- Pretending, acting

Perceptual Psychology

- Key psychological theories underlying Invitational Theory
- Attitudes and beliefs determine behavior
- "(authenticity)...is an experiential achievement that can give order and unity to the person and his or her impact on those with whom he or she interacts."

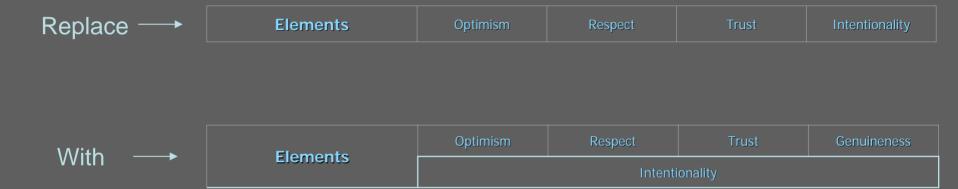

The Process of Invitational Theory

Elements	Optimism	Respect	Trust	Intentionality
↓
	Level I	Level II	Level III	Level IV
Levels	Intentionally Inviting	Unintentionally Inviting	Unintentionally Disinviting	Intentionally Disinviting
Dimensions	Being Professionally Inviting with Self		Being Personally Inviting with Self
Dimensions	Being Professionally Inviting with Others		Being Personally Inviting with Others
↓
Sending Choices	Sending		Not Sending
ţ
Styles	Invisibly Appropriate	Visibly Appropriate	Invisibly Inappropriate	Visibly Inappropriate
↓
Accepting Choices	Accepting		Not Accepting
↓
Outcomes	Beneficial Presence		Lethal Presence

Proposed Process of Invitational Theory

Elements	Optimism	Respect	Trust	Genuineness
	Intentionality
↓
Levels	Level I	Level II	Level III	Level IV
	Intentionally Inviting	Unintentionally Inviting	Unintentionally Disinviting	Intentionally Disinviting
.
Dimensions	Being Professionally Inviting with Self		Being Personally Inviting with Self
	Being Professionally Inviting with Others		Being Personally Inviting with Others
Sending Choices	Sending		Not Sending
↓
Styles	Invisibly Appropriate	Visibly Appropriate	Invisibly Inappropriate	Visibly Inappropriate
↓
Accepting Choices	Accepting		Not Accepting
_
Outcomes	Beneficial Presence		Lethal Presence

The Process of Invitational Theory

Conclusions

- Inherent congruence with IT
 - genuineness should be one of the elements within the criteria for inviting behaviors
- In our discussions about inviting behaviors and as we teach others about the Invitational Model, the concept of Genuineness needs to be part of that discussion

Thank you for not throwing things!